UK signs UNESCO Global Convention on Recognition of Qualifications

The UK has ratified the UNESCO Global Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education. Susan Acland-Hood, Permanent Secretary at the UK Department for Education, was in Paris [pictured above, right] to deposit the UK's ratification with UNESCO.

Dr Cloud Bai-Yun, Chief Executive of Ecctis, said: 'I am proud that UK ENIC played a leading role in the process that resulted in ratification, along with the UK Department for Education, the Devolved Administrations and the UK National Commission for UNESCO. The Global Convention will have significant impact on the future landscape of world qualifications.'

The Global Convention will create a framework for fair, transparent and non-discriminatory recognition of higher education qualifications, putting in place universal principles for improving recognition practices.

Paul Norris, Head of UK ENIC, says: 'The UK's ratification of the Global Convention is an important illustration of the UK's commitment to best practice in global mobility, and to improving international cooperation on recognition. The UK is one of the first 20 signees of the Convention, so will be one of the originating members of the Convention once it enters into force. In doing so, the UK is sending a strong message to the world, that we believe in transparent and fair recognition of international qualifications within the UK.'

The Convention will also help promote the value of UK qualifications across the world. UK ENIC has played an active role in consultations leading to the UK's ratification of the Convention. These consultations involved the UK Devolved Administrations, the British Crown Dependencies and Overseas Territories during the course of 2020-21.

Professor Emerita Anne Anderson, Higher Education Commissioner from the UK National Commission for UNESCO, said: 'Achieving UK ratification of the Global Convention on the Recognition of Higher Education Qualifications was a great example of partnership working to achieve an important goal. The expertise and advice of Dr Bai-Yun was invaluable as we in the UK National Commission for UNESCO garnered support

25 years on: our focus is now the next 25 years

It is 25 years this month since our work began as the national agency performing the official qualification recognition function for the UK.

As we note this landmark, we are proud that the global influence of UK ENIC continues to expand, reflecting the growth in our research, data, knowledge base, and expertise. Our global membership now spans over 60 countries, and we have dealt with well over one million enquiries.

So, with 25 years' experience as an internationally trusted and respected reference point for qualifications and skills standards, our focus is the next 25 years.

Over 4,000 qualifications from secondary to postgraduate level are detailed in our databases, spanning 200 countries, former countries and territories, with comprehensive information on education systems and qualification frameworks, as well as professional and vocational frameworks. Our expert staff continually review and update this data and knowledge base, ensuring its ongoing reliability.

And our training and events provision continues to grow, with both face-to-face and online workshops, seminars, forums and conferences, all designed to support international admissions, recruitment, marketing, TNE, partnerships and development teams.

Our resilience and stability as an organisation, and the value we place in our talented staff, are key to our future plans. We are now looking to extend our reach, with new services in response to what our members need. Our ambition is build further on what we have achieved so far: to be the foremost global supplier of solutions and services in international education, training, and skills, and in the development and recognition of globally portable qualifications.

In these endeavours we appreciate our members' support, and their challenge, and as always we welcome thoughts, suggestions and views to members@ecctis.com READ MORE

'Leading the way in international admissions and recruitment: a new dawn' - 13 May event

Education and infrastructure priorities, and opportunities for UK trade with Vietnam, were on the menu at a lunch with Vietnam's Ambassador to the UK: His Excellency Mr Hoang Long Nguyen [pictured above, fifth from right].

At the London event, hosted by British Expertise International, the Ambassador highlighted growing ties between Vietnam and the UK in the HE sector, and outlined thoughts about how more might be done in relation to TVET and secondary education.

Pete Wood, Head of the UK ENIC Operational Division, who attended, said: 'I had an interesting conversation with the Ambassador, in which it became clear that high quality international education delivered in Vietnamese schools is on the list of the country's top priorities.'

'UK ENIC will be updating our Vietnam country file, specifically the sections relating to HE and TNE, in the coming months, in response to ...' READ MORE

UK ENIC is delighted to be associated with, and supporting, Cambridge Assessment International Education in its latest international admissions and recruitment seminar on Friday 13 May.

The event sees a welcome return to face-to-face interaction in the impressive surroundings of the Royal Society of Chemistry, in Piccadilly, London.

Chris Lyons, Head of External Engagement at UK ENIC will oversee the event once again, chairing proceedings.

This annual seminar has focussed on the challenges posed to international admissions and recruitment staff across the UK, in the face of social, political and global developments of recent years.
